VINTAGE: 2020

GRAPE VARIETIES: 100% Sangiovese grosso

ALTITUDE & SOIL: 210-460 m. als., Hills at medium to high elevations, with soils ranging from clay-loam to loam in texture, and abundant in shale and limestone.

VINTAGE REPORT

A good vintage with a regular climatic trend. Well-distributed rainfall during spring and optimal temperatures during grape ripening.

VINIFICATION AND AGING

Careful grape selection during the harvest. The alcoholic fermentation and the long post-fermentation maceration, aided by pump-over and délestage, take place in temperature-controlled stainless-steel vats. The wine ages for about 24 months in large Slavonian oak casks and then, blended, for a long time in bottle.

TASTING NOTES

Color: intense ruby red with garnet hues

Aromas: complex with hints of plum, blackcurrant and sour cherry, accentuated by sweet tobacco, wild herbs and cloves.

Tasting profile: on the palate the wine is rich, well balanced between soft tannins and a refreshing finish.

WHY?

- The Brunello di Montalcino appellation is universally recognized as one of the top interpretations of the Sangiovese grape, which is known locally as Brunello, and is the sole grape used in this wine.
- A traditional style is adopted for this Brunello di Montalcino DOCG with aging in big casks, bestowing finesse and elegance upon the wine.
- 30 hectares of vineyards are divided into two separate areas: “Greppi”, a zone with steep, angular hills, and “Le Logge”, in the south of the appellation. These contribute to a perfectly balanced wine.
